Candidate motivation

Life is a path full of lessons, ups and downs, and great opportunities. From an early age, I dedicated myself into learning new things, then to share information with parents, friends and relatives. I began my volunteer work early, even in high school. My first acquaintance with the Red Crescent Society of Kyrgyzstan was at my school, when the volunteers of the youth program came to school and talked about the activities of the organization. I strongly believe that volunteer work helped me develop my passion - helping people, developing youth volunteer movement, and doing public affairs, because each of us can change the world for the better. Also, volunteering helped me develop the very important qualities of a good leader and team player; I learned how to work with people, implement our movement principles in actions. I had great opportunity to be employed with the Red Crescent Society of the Kyrgyzstan, I have worked as the coordinator of various programs and senior manager and then was elected to the Governing Board of my NS. During my work I have visited NSs of America, Europe, Asia and Africa regions, gaining invaluable experience of work and communication for developments.

For me trust, understanding, integrity and diversity is key to achieve goals especially in the humanitarian area. My experience and interest in changing the world for the better helped me to become one of the youngest leaders of the National Societies. Today we can see and feel that fast-changing and increasing challenging environment problems are developing and we need to act now with innovative ideas, practical policies, strategies, tools and as well as better preparedness. For me it's important to establish intergenerational dialogue in the Movement, effective coordination among Movement components with efficient and result based outcomes and partnership with States.

I do understand that this position is one of the responsible in our movement and I believe that we need changes, good examples and practices, we need to start from ourselves, invest to the team work, diversity and balanced decisions. Working in one of the biggest humanitarian community give us opportunity as one voice one movement make collective actions which allow us to make better social impact in the humanitarian area through cooperation and partnership with the key actors such as UN, international organizations and NGOs.
